Abu Dhabi during the Formula One Grand Prix reminded me of Brigitte Bardot's St. Tropez of the '60s—except not on this planet, somewhere magical in outer space. The futuristic buildings, the jet set, the yachts...Abu Dhabi comes alive.

I love that you can see the circuit event from the Yas Hotel or the Marina or make a night of Champagne and dancing at Allure by Cipriani amongst the restaurant's usual following of royals and celebrities. Not only were there jet setters, but Formula 1 legends, team owners, sponsors, mechanics, publicists and of course, and auto enthusiasts, who arrived from all over the world to take part of the exciting races and the opening of Cipriani Yas Island.

Overall, the race made history when Sebastian Vettel he won the ultimate prize in motorsport and proudly became the youngest Formula One World Champion. Congratulations!

My next adventure was to Gstaad for A Small World's Winter Weekend. The event was dedicated to la crème de la crème of the social network or for any member who could afford to buy a ticket and feel part of this privileged society.

The palatial Gstaad Palace was closed to welcome the weekend's guests. The program was curated in every detail: from heliskiing and carriage rides to Christmas shopping and Poker School. The entertainment for the gala evening included performances by The Little Dream Foundation, burlesque queen Zoe Scarlett, and singer and Ernesto Bertarelli's wife Kirsty.

Journalists from Swiss and German magazines enjoyed writing pieces about different characters who arrived to support the event like Tara Reid (with new boy and the German WAG Liliana Matthäus, as well as about the generous charity raffle for the Swiss Red Cross.
